

Community Service 2011 Company of the Week: AXA Equitable Week of January 9, 2011

AXA Volunteers in Action

The AXA Foundation spearheads AXA Equitable's volunteer initiatives. Every year AXA people nationwide participate in AXA Day of Service volunteer activities benefitting their local communities.

AXA Day of Service aligns strongly with AXA Equitable's commitment to corporate responsibility. AXA volunteers generously donate time and hands-on effort to a broad range of projects, supporting the company's ongoing partnership with the communities in which our customers, employees and financial professionals live, work and succeed.

Day of Service activities have included tutoring, job shadowing, information sessions for families on financing college, park restoration and recycling programs. The AXA Foundation makes grants to the non-profit organizations where the volunteer events take place, and has awarded $2.85 million in support of the 862 volunteer projects held since the program began in 2000.

Several dozen metro New York AXA volunteers traveled to a public school on Manhattan's Lower East Side, to hold an "AXA Math Olympics". The team worked with 80 third and fourth graders on educational games designed to strengthen math and financial literacy skills.

Our longstanding partnership continued with Classroom Central, a non-profit providing free school supplies to teachers in low-income areas in Charlotte NC. AXA volunteers donated materials, worked in the warehouse, stocked the “Free Store,” and helped teachers select supplies.

Congratulations AXA Equitable!
